Income Tax Fact Sheet 13

Fact Sheet

Interest income you received from U.S. bonds, bills, notes and other obligations are taxable by the federal government and generally are exempt from Minnesota income tax.

When you complete your Minnesota income tax return, you may be able to subtract from your federal taxable income the amount of interest earned on certain U.S. government obligations, including those issued at a discount or dividends received from a mutual fund. The amount you may subtract will be reduced by any expenses deducted on your federal return that are attributable to U.S. bond interest.

Any U.S. bond interest income you may have received as a partner in a partnership, as a shareholder in an S corporation, or as a beneficiary of a trust may also be subtracted.

Because the Minnesota income tax return instruction booklet lists only a few obligations, people often question if a particular U.S. government obligation qualifies for the subtraction. This fact sheet should help answer most of those questions.

Subtraction Requirements

To qualify for this subtraction, the obligation must be all of the following:

- A direct and primary obligation of the United States or be exempt from state taxation under federal law
- In writing, containing a binding promise by the United States to pay specified sums on specific dates, and specifically authorized by Congress
- Interest bearing and the interest income included in your federal taxable income for the year you claim the subtraction

Special Situations That Qualify for the Subtraction

- If the interest was earned as a dividend from a mutual fund and some of the fund's income is derived from interest on federal obligations, you can subtract a portion of the dividend interest. Multiply the amount of your ordinary dividends from your Form 1099-DIV by the percentage of qualifying federal interest income reported by your fund. To find the applicable percentages, see the statement provided by your fund.
- Original Issue Discount (OID) income from U.S. securities is exempt from Minnesota taxation and qualifies for the subtraction.
- Interest income from "zero coupon" bonds issued by the U.S. government (STRIPS) qualifies for the subtraction. Interest on "LIONS," "CATS," and "TIGRS" is also considered U.S. interest.

Special Situations That Do Not Qualify

- Interest on federal tax refunds does not qualify for the subtraction.
- Interest from "Repurchase Agreements" involving federal obligations does not qualify for the subtraction.
- Interest income from obligations of U.S. possessions that are not included in federal taxable income cannot be subtracted. U.S. possessions include:
  - American Samoa
  - Puerto Rico
  - Guam
  - Virgin Islands
- Gain on the sale of federal obligations or mutual funds containing federal obligations is not considered to be interest on U.S. obligations and is taxed the same as any other gain on the sale of an asset.
- Federally taxable distributions from pension plans, including IRAs and Keoghs which are partially or fully funded by U.S. obligations, are fully taxable by Minnesota. The U.S. interest earned by the pension plan is not allowed as a subtraction.

Agencies Issuing Exempt Obligations

The following is a list of agencies that generally issue obligations that are exempt from Minnesota income tax and for which a subtraction is allowed:
